Sensitivities:

S 22(1)(a)(ii)

15. Feedback from public consultations concerning the detail in the draft standards ranged from the draft standards being too prescriptive through to the draft standards not being too prescriptive and therefore not stifling innovation. There has also been some criticism of the fewer number of requirements under the draft standards at a time when the quality of aged care and services is under close scrutiny. However TAG considers that the draft standards, with the support of the Quality Agency's guidance material, will address all issues.
16. The public consultation version of the draft standards listed a number of high prevalence or high risk clinical issues that would need to be addressed in the delivery of care and services. Feedback ranged from the need to include many more clinical issues through to not listing any separate clinical care issues. The Department accepted TAG advice that to list clinical issues would risk omitting others and would focus providers on only those listed (as is the case in the current Accreditation Standards). Rather, the provider is responsible for identifying and addressing the care needs, goals and preferences of each consumer.
17. The Department also consulted publicly on options for improving the quality assessment of the new standards, including a safety and quality declaration for services providing low risk services readily available in the community. s 22(1)(a)(ii)
s 22(1)(a)(ii)

Consultations: During March and April 2017, the Department consulted widely and engaged with as many individuals and organisations with an interest in aged care as possible, including those from urban, regional, rural and remote areas. The Department received around 350 written submissions:
