

National Aged Care Mandatory Quality Indicator Program (QI Program)

Quick reference guide: allied health care minutes

This guide helps approved residential aged care providers collect and report data on allied health.

You must report the allied health quality indicator against:

- allied health care minutes
- percentage of recommended allied health services received.¹

Allied health services are critical to providing quality care to meet the needs of older people.

Allied health professionals:

- are university qualified health professionals
- are not part of medical, dental or nursing professions
- have specialised expertise in preventing, diagnosing and treating a range of conditions and illnesses.

Residential aged care providers must make a range of allied health services available to residents under Schedule 1 of the Quality of Care Principles 2014. This includes access to allied health services as part of an individual therapy program aimed at maintaining or restoring a resident's ability to perform daily tasks.

For the QI Program, allied health services include:

- physiotherapy
- occupational therapy
- speech pathology
- podiatry
- dietetics
- other allied health
- allied health assistant.

This is consistent with the definition for the quarterly financial report (QFR).

Report allied health care minutes for QI Program

We will calculate allied health care minutes from the data you submit through the QFR.

Providers are not required to report anything separately for the allied health care minutes data point.

We will extract the allied health residential labour costs and hours data you submit through the QFR to the QI Program App within the Government Provider Management System (GPMS). This will allow providers to see their allied health data alongside their other QI Program data.

If a provider does not submit their QFR data or does not submit it on time, this will be an automatic non-submission of this quality indicator.
